Personal Profile

I provide consulting, training, mentoring and coaching services to enable organizations and individuals to recognize and achieve sustainable higher levels of performance.

I was introduced to Lean while in a Plant Manager role at Kodak Canada in 2000, receiving training and mentoring from various Lean senseis, including Shingijitsu of Japan. I continued to develop my Lean and 6σ skills, and applied them in senior Operational and Corporate leadership roles enabling organizations to progress on their Lean journeys achieving significant business results. With a strong technical engineering background, I have manufacturing, supply chain, food, and healthcare industry experience working in unionized and non-unionized organizations, and in large corporate as well as entrepreneurial environments.

Adept at assessing current state, I have established future state visions, developed transition strategies and plans, then successfully executed to achieve business results by engaging employees and changing the culture of the organization to deliver sustainable improvements in safety, quality, delivery and cost performance. As an effective change agent, I have driven organizational transformation with the ability to train, coach, counsel, and empower individuals to achieve peak performance and create winning teams.

In my consulting business, I work with individuals, independent business and corporate clients including:
